Hitler Sees Destruction

An interesting political speech is that of the Reverend Father Charles E. Coughlin, delivered Wednesday night in Cleveland. Referring to his organization, he said, "Hereafter anyone who writes a platform for a Presidential candidate must consult the National Union for Social Justice." And added: "The members of the National Union are stronger than any President."

Andrew Jackson offered some objection when a great bank declared its right to political influence and a share in the government.

President Roosevelt need not object, in this case, since it is understood that Father Coughlin's "National Union for Social Justice" is one of the agencies that will work for the President's re-election in 1936. "Thrilling, his arms like a cheer leader," according to the reporters, Father Coughlin led "hissing and booing" for Senator Bulkley, of Ohio. A few years ago people thought the individual was dying out, and great organizations were to be everything.

Radio, used by strong personality, has changed that.

Airplane manufacturers should concentrate on safety, as represented by the parachute for the individual passenger, or better, for an entire plane. Would the manufacturers consider this suggestion, while waiting for something better? Utilize the auto-gyro as a safety device. Arrange to have the auto-gyro, or two of them, folded up on the wings, to be released in case of emergency, and utilized to lower the machine slowly, the propeller cut off. Colonel Doherty, of New York, flies an auto-gyro to his Florida hotel, landing on one of the golf putting greens, as lightly as any feather. If auto-gyro can bring down one plane slowly, why could it not bring down another, if it were used as an auxiliary safety device?

Grim dread of "reckless inflation" stalks and stalks. It asks you: "Don't you realize that because Germany inflated their currency, a bottle of milk in 1923 cost $100,000 marks, which is $100,000 in our money? Do you want that?"

No, we do not want that, even the cow farmer would not want what we do want is enough money to run the nation's business, and what we want is to stop inflating with interest-bearing bonds, thus doubling the size of the debt.

There is, at present, no question of "reckless inflation," there is a question of paying the veterans their money, which would cost the country only a little over two million dollars, instead of paying with inflation-bonds that would cost two billions for principal, and two billions for interest more, for interest.

If you issue bonds, taxpayers must supply sixty-six millions for interest. Issue currency, and government will pay it without any increase of taxation or government debt. Which course would common sense approve?

Remember, please, the other countries, France, in revolution, Italy, in revolution, because they were poverty-stricken, had no longer any credit or resources.

This country is not poverty-stricken. It has only billions of dollars in circulation, with more than eight billions worth of gold put away, is that poverty?

Please don't forget that without greenbacks, inflation could not have won the Civil War, and the greenbacks, causing the shuddering among the best minds of the pawnbroker class, when issued, were later worth par in gold. It is all right to be conservative, but foolish to insist on doubling your debt by bond-inflation.

Chancellor Hitler tells the Literary Digest, "Europe is not in modern conditions," and adds, "Within an hour of the outbreak of war, swift and powerful bombing planes would wreck a ruin upon European cities, which could not be repaired in decades."

The whole world is not big enough for a war under modern conditions. "Nevertheless, it may come. War happens," it is rarely "deliberately planned."

This country, which has not "got around" to establishing a unified air force, has lost, in Hitler's observations about the destruction of cities. We have some words protesting.

Woman is certainly not the "weaker vessel" in the air, although she may be on the ground. Colonel Lindbergh flew from Mexico City to Washington. Continued on Page 3, Column 7

Four New Torch Indictments

VICTIM STILL NAMED AS 'JOHN DOE'

Four new indictments were returned by the Middlesex grand jury today against Frank and Anthony DiStasio, Reverend father and son, already jointly indicted for the insurance-fraud torch murder.

One of the new indictments accuses the father alone of the murder.

Another accuses the son of being an accessory before the fact.

A third accuses both of conspiring to murder a person at the time unknown.

The fourth accuses both of conspiring to steal from insurance companies.

The joint murder indictment still stands. District Attorney Warren L. Bishop said.

STILL AS JOHN DOE
Despite yesterday's virtually certain identification of the victim as John Doe, the indictments, West End, the new indictments, like the first, refer to the victim as "John Doe."

Other features of the indictments are the dates of the alleged conspiracy—between February 1 and May 7. In each indictment, indicating the state will allege the pair plotted the atrocious crime some time ago.

It is possible that later the name of the victim will be revealed.

Lavalle Girl Fire Victim Succumbs

Mary Dean Lavalle, 12-year-old daughter of John Lavalle, noted portrait painter, died today in City Hospital—the fifth fatality of the fire which swept the Lavalle home in Marlborough street, Back Bay, early Tuesday.

The other four who died previously were Mary's sister, Alice; their grandmother, Mrs. Alice Lavalle; and two domestic.

Still in the hospital are another sister, Ellen Lavalle, whose condition is not deemed serious, and Mary McGold, a nurse, who leaped from a window.

The nurse also is out of danger. Two blood transfusions were administered to Mary in the battle to save her life, but she had been injured and burned too badly to recover, and in addition had contracted pneumonia.

Last night the hospital physicians said she probably could not be saved, but at the same time her sister, Ellen, rallied.

NRA ACCORD Reached in Senate

Washington, May 10 (AP)—In an effort to wind up the Congressional session by early July, Senate Democrats in conference today decided to stand by the finance committee's proposal to extend NRA only until April 1, 1936.

BERGDOLL WIFE, Mother in Plea

Philadelphia, May 10 (AP)—A plea from the wife and mother of George Cleveland Bergdoll, fugitive World War draft dodger, for clemency for him, has been made to President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Emma Bergdoll, mother of the fugitive who has been in Germany for several years since he escaped from authorities here, said the plea was made in a registered letter sent to the White House, asking an interview with the President.

EDITOR HOWE Faces Eye Operation

Atchison, Kan., May 10 (AP)—E. W. Howe, noted editor and writer, was operated on today for cataracts of the eye at the University of Kansas Hospital.

He is expected to recover and return to his home in Atchison.

BISHOP TEMPLE On Harvard Staff

The Most Reverend William Temple, Archbishop of York, Eng., has been appointed William Brewster Northcote, Harvard for the academic year 1935-36, it was announced today.

WHITE HOUSE FLOODED BY BOSS WIRES

Washington, May 10—The White House was deluged today with telegrams urging the President either to sign or veto the Patman cash bonus bill.

Attaches estimated that 5000 had arrived before noon, but there was no check as to whether the majority favored the legislation.

Veterans' leaders had asked their followers to send to the White House and Capitol Hill telegrams demanding enactment.

Apparently President Roosevelt was not lacking time to read the messages.

Mr. Roosevelt's conference yesterday with financial advisors was taken as meaning that in the event Congress overrides his veto the President will insist upon levying new taxes.

He did not mention the word "house" in a greeting he sent last night to St. Louis where the convention committee for the forthcoming 1936 American Legion convention was in session.

Seize 3500 Cases of Rum 6 Days Old Loses Tooth

New Bedford, May 10—Federal agents and state police today seized 3500 cases of liquor and arrested one man in a raid in a Seaboard Neck farm, East Fairhaven.

The liquor is believed to have been part of the cargo of the English run rum runner, Acacia, which was seized with its crew in Buzzards Bay last week.

The man arrested today is Paul Bliler, caretaker of the farm.

SWITZES RETURN Sought by U. S.

Paris, May 10 (SNS)—United States authorities have acted to compel Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz, youthful Americans, to return to the United States to face questioning in connection with alleged spy activities in mid-Pacific.

The man arrested today is Paul Bliler, caretaker of the farm.

Missing Girl Home

Search for Miss Margaret Hargrett of Saxton street, Dorchester, was stopped today when the girl returned home in the early hours with a young man with whom she had gone to a dance.

Naval Planes Believed Down

By International News Service, Honolulu, May 10—Rigid "water-tight" secrecy today hid the whereabouts of the aerial wrecks of 16 United States Navy fighting planes that winged westward from here more than 20 hours ago.

They were supposedly bound for Midway Island, in an integral move in the Navy's vast secret war game being played in mid-Pacific.

From authoritative, unofficial sources, it was learned the planes at dawn today had not yet arrived at Midway.

Woman Held as Bandit

Brooklyn, May 10—With trembling hand, a 40-year-old mother, who said that her children needed shoes, clicked a revolver twice today at Edward Dushman and demanded money in an alleged hold-up attempt.

Dushman cringed with her after she had twice pulled the trigger.

Arrested by a traffic officer, John J. Flaherty, the woman proved to be Mrs. Ida Kryger of Allen street, mother of two Brooklyn high school students.

At police headquarters, a long length of clothline was found wrapped around her waist, underneath her clothing.

She declared that she had intended ending her life by hanging if she failed in the holdup attempt.

According to her story, she had just opened her shoe store at 21 Court street, when the woman followed him into the shop, clicked the lock fast and pointed a revolver at him.

"Give me some money or I'll shoot you."

"There isn't any money here, I've just opened up," Dushman replied.

A passerby, hearing Dushman's cry, had run one startled glance at the store tableau and had run to Traffic Officer Flaherty, on duty about 30 feet from the store.

The woman, now weeping and making no further attempt to fire the revolver, was placed under arrest.

AMELIA HONORED

By N. Y. City

New York, May 10 (AP)—Amelia Earhart today received New York City's distinguished service certificate for her contributions to aviation and aerial navigation.

Mayor La Guardia presented the certificate to the blonde flier at City Hall. Miss Earhart was wearing a blue suit and a small blue hat.

4 NEW TORCH DEATH IN ICTINETS USE OF TOSTOSOS

VICTIM NAMED AS 'JOHN DOE,' NOT CROWLEY

of Crowley will be substituted for "John Doe" in all the indictments. While identification of Crowley has been accepted by all concerned in the case, including Frank DiStasio, purported to have confessed the crime, there still remains doubt as to whether legal identification has been established. Nobody had viewed the charred remains and said:

MAY NOT BE LEGAL

"That is Dan Crowley," said, nobody can ever do so. Crowley is missing, the nations in two books of the victim were his, the keys with the victim's ashes were his, and Frank DiStasio, viewing a picture of him, has said "That is him."

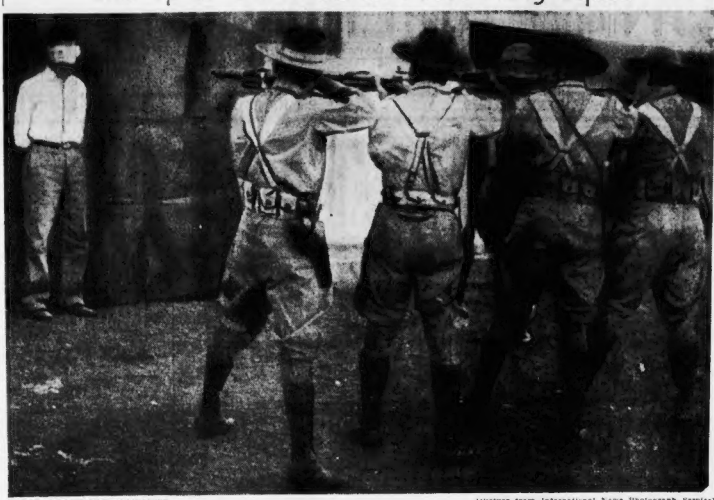

ALIVE IN FLAMES

The official autopsy report filed with Bishop today by Dr. Norman M. Hunter, medical examiner, emphasized the horror of the crime. The sheer brutality, the crime resulted from fractures of the skull and all limbs, from resulting hemorrhage, from incineration of the body while still breathing and from inhalation of fire and smoke—killing the victim to have been still alive when the torch was applied.

Dr. Hunter found death to have been without equal, to Massachusetts, at least.

Announcement that the father had changed his story and declared he lured the victim from Boston Common instead of from the South End led to a suspicion that other changes may be made.

193 'REASONS' FOR LET FIGHT TO SAVE PRINCE

By International News Service

Trenton, N. J., May 10.—Alleging prejudicial tactics of the prosecution, counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann today carried their fight to avert the death chair for the convicted Lindbergh baby slayer by filing with the court of appeals and appeals 193 reasons for reversal of Hauptmann's conviction.

The court will hear the appeal June 20.

The lengthy document was filed by Robert Rosenbaum of defense counsel.

It held prejudicial error was committed by Attorney General John C. W. in characterizing the defendant thusly:

"An animal, an animal lower than the lowest feral in the animal kingdom, public enemy number one."

Similar error occurred, the appeal argued, when Wilets said the defense had "lots of money" received from "cranks and idiots and unscrupulous all over the country," and when he referred to the "graves of the Morrises and of Colonel Lindbergh."

Special attention was centered in the document on the summation of Wilets, from which quotations were made as being prejudicial error. The quotations included:

"There is nobody at this table that doesn't feel he is guilty. I don't care what they say."

LINDY "MOST GLORIOUS"

"What type of man would murder the child of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Anne Morrow, Count Lindbergh, who was a poor boy, for the sake of achievement, for the sake of science, one evening slipped into an airplane and spanned the ocean, risked his life in the air, and came back with a few letters of introduction, and the next day found himself the most popular and the most admired man in this world."

"Anne Morrow, the cultured daughter of a former ambassador to Mexico and later United States Senator, a man who surely he had lived in the grandest of homes."

"Who would be the type of person that would take a child like that and murder it? Who could there be?"

"Why, men and women, if that little baby, if that little, curly-haired youngster were out in the grass in the jungle, breathing, and you saw him, and you saw him, any tiger, any lion, the most venomous snake would have passed that child without hurting a hair of his head."

Havana, May 10.—"If women have the courage to fight soldiers, then they have courage to face a firing squad."

These words from Secretary of the Interior Maximiliano Smith appeared to seal the fate of the two women among the 12 followers of Antonio Gutierrez who were captured after the ex-Secretary of the Interior and two of his radio band were killed defending a fort near Matanzas.

The youthful American-born Gutierrez was also accused of complicity in the recent kidnapping of Falla Bonet, wealthy sugar magnate, more than $100,000 of the $200,000 ransom money was said to have been found near his body.

His 12 captured followers, four speedy court martial and probable execution.

It was reported that six Cuban sailors were being held in Cuban fortresses on suspicion of having aided Gutierrez in his plan to escape to Mexico aboard a yacht.

never flew from Mexico City to New York.

Amelia Earhart flew from Mexico City to New York with out stopping and all alone. But between Mexico and Washington, D. C., she cut Lindbergh's time by fourteen hours.

In other words, she flew the distance twice as fast as Colonel Lindbergh flew it. When a woman can beat the performance of the best flyer in the world and then go on from Washington to New York, she is no "weak vessel."

Morris, Hauff, Thielon and Gerner, killed in the Illinois electric chair last night, under the program changed, refused to "flip a coin" to decide which would die first, second, third.

The three, described as "bank bandits and killers," said "that seem like taking death too lightly."

SENATE LASHES A Peeping Tom in the Air

By International News Service

Del Monte, Cal., May 10.—An alarmed "Peeping Tom" was the object of a Senate attack today for a request of state society girls, who claim he interrupts their sun bathing.

As the girls retire from the enclosure of sand and discard their bathing suits to lie in the sun, a plane comes swooping lastly overhead.

The aviator waves a mocking salute to the sun bathers as they run for cover, and flies on.

MALDEN GIRL Dying in Crash

Injuries from which she may die were suffered today by Miss Helen Abbott, 25, of Lincoln avenue, Malden, when she was thrown from an automobile involved in a crash at Saugus on the Newburyport highway.

Her driver, Michael De Mico, 40, of Eastern avenue, Malden, sustained injury, as did the other driver, James Fallon, of Enfield, N. H. Fallon was arrested, however, on a charge of driving an illegally registered trailer.

Lucky Chain

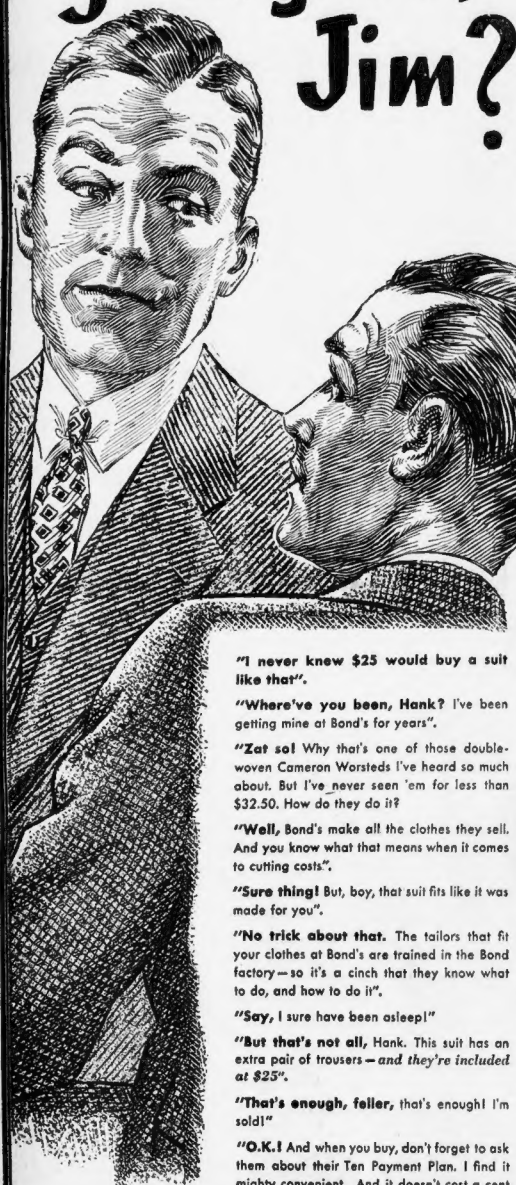

By International News Service

Medford, Ore., May 10.—The chain letter case was credited with returning a long-lost daughter to her mother here today.

After a search for 15 years, Mrs. Marie McDaniel picked up a "son-did-da" chain letter sent her by Los Angeles friends, and saw a name similar to that of her missing daughter.

She wrote Mrs. McDaniel the last trace of Ruth when she left her as a baby girl with relatives in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

How long has this been going on, Jim?

"I never knew $25 would buy a suit like that."

"Where've you been, Hank? I've been getting mine at Bond's for years."

"Zat so! Why that's one of those double-women Camerasteds I've heard so much about. But I've never seen 'em for less than $32.50. How do they do it?"

"Well, Bond's make all the clothes they sell. And you know what that means when it comes to cutting costs."

"Sure thing! But, boy, that suit fits like it was made for you."

"No trick about that. The tailors that fit your clothes at Bond's are trained in the Bond factory—so it's a cinch that they know what to do, and how to do it."

"Say, I sure have been asleep!"

"But that's not all, Hank. This suit has an extra pair of trousers—and they're included at $25."

"That's enough, feller, that's enough! I'm sold!"

"O.K. And when you buy, don't forget to ask them about their Ten Payment Plan. I find it mighty convenient. And it doesn't cost a cent extra."

"Thanks, Jim! Me for Bond's, today or tomorrow sure!"

RACE TO SAVE REECHARD ON THE 'SPOT'

Providence, May 10.—With the quarry hiding in terror, state police and remnants of the Bettich gang were racing today to reach a former member of the outlaw organization.

State police wish to get the information about the fair-gang activities which he is almost certain to give if they can take him under their protection.

The remnants of the scattered mob he deserted aim to rub him out and silence him forever.

Identity of the former gang member was learned today by the Boston Evening American and it was learned also that state police negotiations with him are being conducted through newspaper advertisements—the method "Jafie" Condon used in the Lindbergh case. The proposed informant is a former lightweight boxer, a close associate of the jailed Carlo Retlich and for many years a "gun" for the Bettich mob, it was learned.

According to information, the man was associated in the Walsh kidnaping, was a friend of the murdered Vincent "Legs" Carrella and knew much about the Andino Merola slaying.

The second of a series of state police advertisements was carried in the columns of the papers here today. It read:

"Send information direct to Lincoln."

The first insertion in yesterday's evening newspapers had said:

"Your letter received. More information wanted regarding 'E' case, state police."

The "ad" today was the direct result of the mob failing to reply to last night's instructions.

FEARS FOR HIS LIFE

It was learned that he is hiding in Providence, in terror of his life. He made his decision to contact state police two days ago. It was ascertained, and then, when he thought of the possible consequences—"a spot death"—became fearful.

Lincoln, mentioned in today's advertisement by the state police, is the headquarters for the mob.

It is 19 miles from Warwick, site of the so-called "crime castle" of the Bettich gang, and seven miles from Providence.

State police have taken particular precautions so that the informant will not be "rubbed out" on the roads into Lincoln in case he decides to make a personal visit.

From reliable sources, however, it was determined that the man has no intention of going that far at the present time. He prefers to do business by mail.

BRAND FALSE REPORTS

Reports that it was a woman who was opening the negotiations were characterized as absolutely false by those who knew the background of the deal.

State police, on the other hand, were perfectly willing to let the impression be broadcast that a woman was writing to them in order to throw possible avengers off the trail.

What this informant is willing to tell is well known, is just who was involved in the kidnaping and slaying of Walsh, a rum baron of prohibition days.

He is also willing to show the hiding place of a large portion of the $40,000 ransom money, vainly paid by Walsh's relatives for his return.

The man is unable to get to the police himself because he fears death if he moves alone.

INDICTMENTS DUE MONDAY

The federal grand jury in Boston will return indictments in the $23,000 Fall River mail truck robbery on Monday, U. S. Attorney Francis J. W. Ford announced.

The grand jurors were meeting again today with Ford, but whether any more witnesses are to be heard was not yet determined.

Only witness of yesterday was William H. Grady, the railway mail clerk who had custody of the stolen funds while they were in transit to the B. M. C. Durfee Bank.

Thomas Izzi, alleged chauffeur for Andino Merola, slain member of the gang, was in East Cambridge jail. He was committed there in default of $23,000 bail. He is held as a material witness.

IOWA U. CLEARED By Vice Jury

Town City, Ia., May 10.—A Johnson county grand jury reported on its investigation of vice conditions, precipitated by revelation of immoral parties at a University of Iowa fraternity recently, and declared that "what there was was of bootlegging, we find conditions as good as could reasonably be expected."

Indictments were returned against seven persons for violation of the state liquor law.

TWO CONFESS Postoffice Theft

Concord, N. H., May 10.—Trial of three Bay State youths for robbery of a Portsmouth branch postoffice in 1934 resumed today. Two of the men, after confessing, testified against their companion.

They are Albert Schindick of Lawrence and Howard Schmidt of Methuen. The third is Bastiano Bonacorsi of Lawrence, who denies having had any knowledge of the crime until he read of it in the newspapers.

2000 at Dance

Approximately 2000 persons attended the annual reunion of St. Peter's Church, Cambridge, in Hotel Continental to enjoy a program of bridge, dancing and whist. Acting Mayor John W. Lyons and Judge Francis J. Good of the Cambridge municipal court were present.

30,000 OUT In Auto Strike

Detroit, Mich., May 10.—Moving to avert a general strike throughout the automobile industry, General Motors Corporation officials agreed to participate in an arbitration meeting in Toledo in another effort to settle the "key strike" in the Chevrolet plant there. In numerous other GMC subsidiary factories it is estimated that more than 30,000 are now idle.

31.7 KNOTS Hit by Normandie

Paris, May 10 (AP)—French hopes for capturing the blue ribbon of the Atlantic with France's new luxury liner, the Normandie, soared today when it was learned the vessel reached a maximum speed of 31.7 knots during her preliminary trial.

Officials said this speed indicated the Normandie would be capable of crossing the Atlantic with an average speed of 28 knots.

SONS OF ITALY Plan Convention

Planning the national convention of the Sons of Italy, 90 venerable and 25 grand district deputies of the Boston and other eastern Massachusetts lodges will meet in Brockton Sunday as guests of the Brockton lodge.

Venerable Danis Jergamano and Miss Lena Gennaro are in charge of arrangements. The national convention will be held here in October.

Sales Tax Revived

The proposed state sales tax, supposed to have been killed by its defeat in the Senate last week, representative J. Walton Tuttle of Framingham led the move to have it recommitted to the joint committee on taxation.

JORDAN MARSH TO BUILD SEVEN MODEL HOMES

What is believed to be the first project of its kind launched by any department store in the country was announced today by Jordan Marsh Company.

It is a home building project in which seven model homes will be constructed following a contest open to New England architects, engineers, draftsmen, builders and architectural students.

These seven homes will cost, exclusive of land and furnishings from $5000 to $25,000 each. Building lots will be located in desirable sections of metropolitan Boston.

Jordan Marsh Company decided that such a project would be a decided step to business recovery and at the same time an endorsement to activities of the Federal Housing Administration.

Actual details of the plan are to be explained in the Boston Sunday newspapers on Sunday, May 12th. It is the outgrowth of a study begun last November by Jordan Marsh experts.

Explaining the general idea and purpose of the project today, Edward R. Mitton, merchandising vice-president, said:

"When the details of the Federal Housing Administration program were announced, they appeared to us as having important possibilities of actually aiding business recovery in the entire country."

"Revelation of home construction can be one of the most important factors in creating a new prosperity."

"The building industry itself, which has struggled so long, and so hard against the depression is, of course, the most important."

"When we feel that the major benefits to be derived from such a program as was suggested by the FHA, we felt that every business man, whether in banking, manufacturing, architecture, building, real estate or mercantile business should give the utmost to publicize and develop this movement."

"When people buy new homes they also want new things to go into them. There is new planning to be manufactured, major household appliances to be installed, as well as the ordinary type of home furnishings industries represented, all of which materially benefit by such a plan as ours."

FOURFOLD PURPOSE

Purposes of the project, Mr. Mitton declared, were fourfold:

To show how much one can build today for how little, and what proportion of expenditures the FHA will finance.

To show how reasonably one can furnish or refurnish today, and how low—properly budgeted—is the cost for so doing.

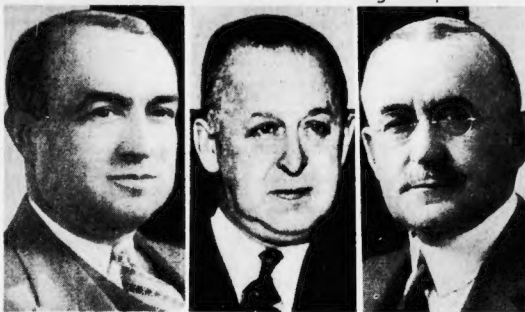

To publicize properly the operations and items which the FHA will help finance and how reasonably they will do so.

To demonstrate how low the cost of refurnishing is today in proportion to what one receives.

Rather than confine the Home Development Plan to a single home in a single price field, Jordan Marsh Company decided to build a minimum of seven houses, covering most of the average price fields of the present day.

This was, Mr. Mitton explained, so that all persons likely to build would be interested, not only in actual construction costs but in

Mittons Direct New Housing Project

EDWARD R. MITTON

RICHARD MITTON

GEORGE W. MITTON

Leaders in New Housing Development

how reasonably such homes can be furnished.

He continued:

"There will be one house at $5000; one at $6000; two at $7500 each; one at $10,000; one at $15,000 and one at $25,000."

"We could have simply gone out and contracted for the plans for these houses. But inasmuch as we felt the major results to be derived from our program was the proper publicizing of the opportunities offered by FHA, we decided to have an architects' contest."

"It is to be open to all New England and to be judged by a competent committee of disinterested experts. Suitable awards for the winning house and honorable mention awards for others will be given the winners."

"Immediately upon the conclusion of the architects' contest, bids will be opened, so that builders may have an opportunity to bid upon the construction of the houses."

"Each house must be equipped with every possible modern device and appliances that it is possible to build into for the price."

"In many of these devices and appliances, through the FHA program it will be possible to borrow money to aid to one's present home."

"Such equipment will be plainly indicated in the houses and attendant will be thoroughly trained to explain this to the public."

"Jordan Marsh Company decorators and advisors will, of course, supervise the entire decoration. At least one house will be completely modern in design."

"We believe that the benefits derived from the spreading of this movement will be immediately helpful to all American business."

"We hope that our plan will be adopted and carried through by the other department stores in the country so that the efforts and benefits of it may be spread broadcast throughout the country."

Mystery of Dead Woman

The mystery death of a mysterious woman baffled Somerville police today.

She was known as Mildred Sawyer, and she was about 45 years old.

She was found dead today, her head on a folded blanket on the floor of a room she rented on Wallace street.

Near her were three bank books showing total deposits of about $500 under the name of Mary O'Haire. There were $200 in bills in a tin box.

Divorces Lifer

New Bedford, May 10.—Mrs. Bertha Pierce today was granted a divorce from Elton W. Pierce, a lifer at State Prison.

The decree was granted in the Bristol County Probate Court.

PAY RAISE FOR DETECTIVES

Pay increases were given today to Massachusetts state detectives by approval of Governor Curley.

In his move to organize the detective force of the Commonwealth along the lines of Scotland Yard, the governor announced three grades or ranks, and the addition of 15 more men to the present strength of 33 detectives and five inspectors.

The governor's announcement was made following a conference with Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk and State Commissioner of Administration and Finance Charles F. Howard.

Under the new deal in Massachusetts, Captain James F. Blake, chief of state detectives, is raised in salary from $3180 to $3720 a year. Eventually he will receive a maximum of $5100.

Detective inspectors will receive from $3180 to a minimum to $3720 as a maximum.

Lieutenant detectives will be raised from $2400 to $2940 a year. Until now, lieutenant detectives, their title being little more than a courtesy title, have received from $2400 to $2840 annually.

Under the new order, nine of the present detective force will be raised to the rank of inspector.

Also, the line previously drawn between detectives and fire inspectors has been wiped out and all in the division will be subject hereafter to joint or individual assignments.

This year the pay increases will total in the vicinity of $37,000, but for a full year will amount to approximately $72,000.

Royal Beauty and Society Man Elope, Wed by Justice

By Associated Press

Harrison, N. Y., May 10.—Italian royal blood and that of New York society were united today in the elopement of Donna Cristiana Torlonia, 21-year-old daughter of Count Marino Torlonia of Italy, and the former Countess Elsie Moore Torlonia of 375 Park avenue, New York city, and Daniel Lord, 28, bank clerk and son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin B. Lord of 160 East 66th street, Manhattan.

The bride's brother, Don Alessandro Torlonia, married this spring the Infanta Beatrice, daughter of Alfonso, abdicated king of Spain, at a state wedding attended by royalty of Italy and Spain in Rome.

Young Lord and his bride were married at town hall a few minutes after 2 a. m. by Justice of the Peace Leo Minter of Silver Lake, who had been routed from bed to perform the simple civil ceremony.

So unlike the pomp and preparation for the Rome nuptials of Mrs. Lord's brother and the Spanish princess.

A license had been obtained from Town Clerk William A. Widling here after a wedding party of six in evening attire, had first called at White Plains police headquarters to see about finding a parson or judge.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride telephoned from the Town Hall to her mother's Park Avenue home and broke the news.

Lord likewise phoned to his parents. His mother is the former Lillian L. F. Barker.

The bride was attended by her sister, Donna Marina, whose debut was a feature of last winter's New York social season. Alexander Yank, social register, was best man.

Others of the party were Edith De Forest Lord, a cousin of the bridegroom, and Louis Clark Grinnell.

TEXTILE CRISIS WARNING FROM N. E. COUNCIL

By Associated Press

Washington, May 10.—A New England governor and a church bishop today joined withouten manufacturers in a plea to a special cabinet committee for immediate action to aid the cotton textile industry.

Governor H. Styles Briggs, in a statement presented to the committee by his secretary, Gordon Eager, said:

"Never has there been such a sharp decrease in employment in the textile industry in our state as that which has occurred during the past five months."

The Right Rev. John O. Peterson, bishop of Manchester, N. H., told the committee he was here "to discuss the social aspects of a grave situation" and added that "they are far from encouraging."

N. E. COUNCIL JOINS

The New England Council entered the controversy over the processing tax, wage differential, and Japanese imports.

Dudley Harmon, executive vice president, said that "if the recently accelerated rate of losses in the industry is not checked soon, thousands of employees and many cities and towns will be in a desperate situation."

Also present at today's conference, probably the last to be conducted by the cabinet committee, were Representatives Rogers and Tobey of New Hampshire, a group of New Hampshire manufacturers and business men and the policy committee of the northern cotton mills.

Robert Armour of the Nashua Manufacturing Company and a member of Secretary Rogers's business advisory council, was expected to sum up the arguments of the northern mills at the conclusion of today's session.

SITUATION CRITICAL

"That a critical situation faces the textile industry in New Hampshire is evident from the records of closed mills, the figures for unemployment relief, and the employment statistics compiled by the State Department of Labor," Briggs said in his statement.

Speaking for the New England Council, Harmon told the committee that "the New England community is aroused to a greater extent than ever before" and said that if the recently accelerated rate of losses in the industry were not checked soon thousands of employees and many cities and towns would be desperate."

State House Briefs

The House ways and means committee reported favorably a bill permitting cities and towns to purchase other than prison-made goods. Under existing laws municipalities are required to purchase such goods, if they are of a quality and price comparable with such materials on the open market.

A resolve calling for investigation by the State health department of sewage disposal by communities on the Connecticut river was favorably reported by the House committee on public health.

The Senate ways and means committee favorably reported a bill placing holding companies under the jurisdiction of the department of public utilities.

A bill authorizing the town of Chatham to vote this year on the question of granting liquor licenses was passed to be engrossed by the Senate.

Six employees of the State Safety committee have not received wages for the past six weeks, it was revealed today. It was expected the State budget would contain an item of $12,000 to meet such expenses and to guarantee salaries for the next several months but the money was not asked for by Governor Curley.

It is assumed that the Governor will transfer the necessary funds from his contingent fund to the safety committee.

JARVIS CHARGE CALLED VAGUE

Theodore E. Rein of Chicago, associate counsel with James H. Valley, Jr., in the case of William L. Jarvis and 24 others in a $500,000 stock case, arrived before Judge Hugh D. McEllen in federal court today on motion to quash the indictment.

Assistant United States Attorney Charles W. Bartlett, Jr., opposed the motion.

The indictments are too confusing, too vague, indefinite and uncertain," argued Rein. "A criminal indictment should be more definite and certain."

The indictments, returned February 8, charged investors lost some $500,000 through purchases of 50,000 shares of Curtis Manufacturing Company of Delaware, now bankrupt.

Julius McEllen took the matter under advisement.

PLEA FOR BONUS TO DELUGE CAPITOL

By Associated Press
Washington, May 19.—Delaying the final struggle until next week, bonus leaders today launched a week-end effort to marshal every ounce of their strength in a last-minute effort to save the Patman new currency bill from defeat.

Methods that proved so potent in defeating the World Court protocols were called into play as veterans' leaders sought to deluge the capital and the White House with a million or more telegrams from supporters.

President Roosevelt made no pronouncement, though he conferred with financial advisers in what was generally regarded as a move to marshal statistics for a vote on the $2,000,000,000 bill.

He did not mention the word "bonus" in a greeting he sent last night to St. Louis, where the convention committee for the fourth annual 1936 American Legion convention was in session.

ROOSEVELT'S STAND
"War veterans are and should be interested in the welfare of the country as a whole," he said.

"Our constant objective is to care for the disabled, the sick and destitute."

"American Legionnaires and the veterans of all wars support this national policy."

In some quarters this was regarded as rebuffing the idea the President expressed at Roanoke, Va., some time ago in an address generally interpreted as a stand against full and immediate payment of the bonus.

"The care of the disabled, sick, destitute and starving," he said in Roanoke, "is the first task of the country."

The inflationary bill, which has passed Congress, remained bottled up in the Senate while its backers sought support. Private Senate polls indicated a vote would be sustained, possibly by as many as five or six votes.

HOLDING BILL IN SENATE
Senator Thomas (D) Okla., Patmanite leader whose motion for a reconsideration kept the bill in the Senate, did not plan to release it for its journey to the White House until next week.

President Roosevelt conferred for an hour with Secretary Morgenthau, Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, and Budget Director Daniel Bell. The only comment was: "We were discussing the proposed bonus legislation."

Earlier Patman supporters had turned thumbs down on compromise proposals.

MR. PRESIDENT! PAY THE BONUS

President Roosevelt:
The Patman bill providing for the payment to World War veterans of adjusted compensation has been passed by both Houses of Congress.

The veterans are entitled to this money. The payment of it will benefit the country at large.

The people of the nation as represented by Congress wish the veterans to have this money they have earned. I wish them to have it.

I respectfully request that you as the Chief Executive sign the Patman bill.

Signed

Address

miss proposals from non-presidential sources which would give the President a choice of methods of financing the bonus payment.

The American Legion leadership, which had fought for the orthodox Vinson bill, joined the Veterans of Foreign Wars, backers of the Patman bill, in aligning support for the latter measure.

Frank N. Belgrano, national commander of the Legion, sent messages to Legion leaders in the states urging them:

"Write the President not to veto and wire your congressmen and senators if the bill is vetoed to vote to override the veto."

James E. Van Zandt, commander-in-chief of the V. F. W., appealed to the country to telegraph President Roosevelt. The goal he set was 1,000,000 telegrams.

'Sonny Boy' Cross at Hollywood

By Universal Service
Hollywood, May 19.—Swathed in blankets, the pride and joy of the Johnson-Kester family, waited his greetings to Hollywood.

The bride and groom in question is Mayor Albert Johnson, Jr., whose blue eyes and black hair so captivated Al Johnson and Ruby Kester, film stars, that they adopted him this week from a Chicago orphanage.

The seven-week-old youngster was the center of attraction when the train pulled into the station in Pasadena, but only a privileged few caught sight of his features. Miss Kester explained, cuddling the blancketed infant:

"Junior has been an adorable baby all the way from Chicago, but on such excitement has made him crank."

JURORS CHARGE ERA FUNDS USED TO TEACH COMMUNISM

By International News Service

New York, May 10—Twenty thousand students throughout the nation are being taught Communism through the use of federal relief funds, the Federal Grand Jury Association for the Southern District of New York charged today in a protest to the Senate appropriations committee.

In a letter signed by James H. Burnett, the president, the association declared its members had knowledge of subversive activities directed against the American form of government gathered through their service on federal grand juries.

"Convincing evidence has been brought to our attention that ERA funds were used to pay adult students $3 per week to be taught Communism and subversive doctrines," the letter read.

20,000 SUCH STUDENTS
"We understand that there were some 20,000 such students in more than 20 schools for workers scattered throughout the country and that the graduates were to become instructors and leaders in activities intended to bring about the overthrow of our government."

Among the subjects taught in the schools, the association disclosed, were:

"How to foment a strike."

"How to take over the industries of the United States, especially the munitions plants."

"How to bring about the general strike."

"How to overthrow the United States government and establish a Soviet union."

The letter concluded:

C. S. STAND 'ABSRD'

"We submit that it is an absurdity for a government to supply funds to persons seeking to destroy it."

"Therefore, we respectfully and earnestly ask that your committee take such action as will prevent relief allotments being used to support schools for Communism, their teachers or their students."

Governor Talmadge's Program for New Party, Which Shall Be the Old Democratic Party

The call to return to the Constitution, made by Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia over the radio, has met with a tremendous response throughout the country. First part of the text of the speech, delivered last night, follows:

MY FELLOW COUNTRYMEN:

This is my first trip to Washington in little over a year.

Prosperity has returned to the City of Washington. The hotels are overflowing, all calls are busy, you can hardly get waited on in the dining rooms, charges have doubled and a waiter frowns on you when you give him a 25-cent tip.

A little over a year ago, you would get a happy smile for a 25-cent tip.

No wonder it is easy for one who stays close in the confines of Washington to imagine that prosperity is coming back by leaps and bounds.

I had the unique pleasure today of seeing the artificial mountain built here out of the taxpayers' money for wild sheep to walk on, and sleep on.

This morning I saw quite a delegation preparing to leave for the Mediterranean Sea, to serve as the basis of the sea and compare it with Roman times.

I edged close to this crowd, and heard some of them remark that the water was bluer there in the Mediterranean Sea; that the sunshine and skies were bright, and the trip was ideal, and the dream of all sailors.

Of course, this trip to be turned by the taxpayers' money.

Dogglers Absent

I then saw some very supple young men and young women coming out of a building, and was informed that their business was their course in athletic dancing in New York—paid for by the taxpayers of America.

There was another crowd on their way to New York to take a course in ballet etiquette, provided for out of the taxpayers' money.

I could not find the hood-dogging crowd. This is the high-pressure course being provided to certain citizens out of the taxpayers' money.

I imagine that they are kept in reserve, to step in an emergency when the program at Washington is questioned.

Then the hood-doggers will rush over the country and attend conditions of real business men try to intimidate them and stop any criticism of the New Deal.

Restrict and Hinder

The hood-doggers, I understand, who visit the editors of newspapers with persuasive, high-pressure methods, telling them about the great pile of money that is all-powerful and all-mighty.

Of course, when anything is all-powerful and all-mighty, there can business, who are fearfully watching what is going on, wondering what is going to happen and trying to honestly protect their business.

When I saw some of the hood-doggers, I saw them with their hands behind their backs, and every leader of us governmental acts after the taxpayers' money.

End of Rainbow

Why, if it keeps on a few more years, Washington will be larger than New York, but it will be of a different type. It will be the pilgrim type, looking for the end of the rainbow.

Who started all this?

During the Hoover administration the destruction of food and clothing was advocated. During the Hoover administration, relief was not only advocated, but was actually begun in every state in the Union.

At the close of the Hoover administration we had a presidential campaign and all the policies of the Hoover administration were denounced from coast to coast.

The candidate on the Democratic ticket loudly heralded the billion dollars a year, and stated that such a case of wanton extravagance had to be stopped or the nation would be wrecked.

During the closing years of the Hoover administration, the same Democratic leader heralded in speeches over the union and had written into the Democratic platform provisions denouncing and protesting against the processing laws.

Now, anything said about the NIRA during 1932 was not rather to revise argued to the people of this country.

Were not the virtues of the Sherman antitrust law proclaimed in every state and the people led to believe that they would be protected from the great trusts and monopolies?

Cox Replies

Washington, May 10.—E. E. Cox (D.) of Georgia, who is serving his sixth consecutive term in Congress, and doesn't see eye-to-eye with Governor Eugene Talmadge, on federal government policies, will answer the governor's fiery attack on the New Deal Tuesday night over a Columbia radio hookup.

He will speak from 11 to 11:30 p. m. Eastern daylight time.

Why, if it keeps on a few more years, Washington will be larger than New York, but it will be of a different type. It will be the pilgrim type, looking for the end of the rainbow.

HEARST TROPHY PRESENTED TO MISSOURI

By Universal Service

Columbia, Mo., May 10—The William Randolph Hearst rifle trophy, awarded annually to high caliber collegiate sharpshooters, was presented to the University of Missouri R. O. T. C. squad at colorful military ceremonies here.

While the university's 850 cadets stood at attention the five men Tiger team, which placed third in competition with 38 seventh Corps Area teams, was presented the Hearst trophy by Dr. Fred Erick A. Middleburgh, acting president of the university. He said to the winning team:

"I am proud of the work done by you men. I want to commend you for the wonderful record you have made; it is in accordance with the best tradition of the school."

ALLUING TO Mr. Hearst's support of collegiate sharpshooting competition, Dr. Middleburgh said: "Encouragement of rifle competition is not encouraging of warfare but rather encouragement towards assurance of peace and individual efficiency."

He said he hoped Missouri would be able to conquer its traditional and victorious foe, Minnesota, in the Seventh Corps Area competition and bring the Hearst gold trophy to the Tiger camp.

Cadet Captain Glenn R. Dixon, Columbia, Mo.

Cadet Captain Carl D. Siemel, New Florence, Mo.

Cadet Lieutenant Max E. Ferry, Mountain View, Mo.

Cadet Lieutenant Conway Holmes, Kansas City, Mo.

EX-HUXLEY STUDENT

Montague is one of seven journalism students who came here after they were ousted from Louisiana State University for arousing the ire of Kirtland J. Lee, Jr., editor of a student paper editorial.

Approximately 200 students and townspeople fringed Francis quadrangle as a military parade grounds here. They were in sharp contrast with the sparse 200 who turned out for the peace demonstration, staged as part of a nation wide anti-war college strike recently.

Threatened by Minnesota in their drive to top the Hearst gold trophy for first place, the Missourians took second rank in the corps area last year to win the coveted silver award.

Missouri boasts military units in both field artillery and infantry.

Convention Sought in '36

Boston's Advantages Cited to Democrats

A move to bring the 1936 Democratic convention to Boston was under way today.

Joseph A. Maynard, collector of the port, sent a letter to Postmaster-General James A. Farley asking his support of the movement.

Maynard, as former chairman of the State Democratic Committee, is considered one of the strongest supporters of President Roosevelt in the commonwealth.

He cited Boston's many excellent hotels, its large convention halls and its facilities for excursions as potential factors in helping the national Democratic committee, of which Farley is head, to make up his mind in Boston's favor.

Tunney Can Still Hit!

Batters Ex-Grid Star in 'Friendly Bout'

By Associated Press

San Francisco, May 10—The Examiner says Gene Tunney put on the gloves with Herbert Fishbacker, Jr., son of the San Francisco capitalist, for a "friendly hit bout" that turned into a real hitting match.

As a result, the paper states, Fishbacker, former football star, is nursing a bruised and swollen nose, but whether he succeeded in hitting the ex-heavyweight champion was not learned.

Tunney and his wife, the former Polly Lauder, are here on the last lap of a world cruise.

"How many pounds did you fight?" Fishbacker was asked.

"Too many," he is quoted as replying. "My goal, that man can hit."

HOSPITAL DAY ENLISTS AID OF MISS CURLEY

Miss Mary Curley, daughter of the Governor, will take a prominent part in the observance of National V. F. W. Hospital Day next Sunday, at the U. S. Veterans' Bureau Hospital, Rutland Heights.

As guest of the Department of Massachusetts, Ladies' Auxiliary, sponsoring the program at the institution, she will address the patients and also assist the committee in providing candy and cigarettes.

The V. F. W. Auxiliary will present more than 100 utility bags, containing useful articles. Throughout the main dining room and various wards, the committee will distribute flowers and potted plants.

A complete program of entertainment has been arranged by the auxiliary in cooperation with Rev. Wallace E. Hayes, department chaplain, who is assigned to that institution as a representative of the Federation of Churches.

Colonel Joseph H. Hanks, A. O. C. M. C. G., national junior vice commander-in-chief, V. F. W., will act as master of ceremonies. Besides an orchestra, there will be several prominent, solo and instrumental stars present to temporarily relieve the monotony of hospital atmosphere.

'LADIES' SMOKER,' ALAS! DILL INVESTORS TO GET NOTHING

Men Banned at G. O. P. Girls' Party Tonight; Boxing Bout and Gown Show on Program

By Associated Press
Milford, Ct., May 10. Men are going to be as scarce as barber poles at the North Pole when the Young Women's Republican Club holds its 'Ladies' smoker' tonight in the Fowler Memorial building here.

The hall is to be a no man's land and if there is anyone who thinks it won't be—well, the club has prepared for that.

They have arranged with four of Milford's finest to guard building entrance and was to the gate crushers.

And what's more, this is to be a smoker in every sense of the word. With women sharing equal rights with men these days, there is nothing remarkable in that, the Republican women say.

Chief of the event is a boxing bout between two club members, "Battling Smith" and "Punching Poland."

The club announced today that these two cauliflower heads have been training for weeks just to sock their stuff tonight.

The bout is but one of 15 events which will include an adagio dance, a showing of the gown of the past and future, the "March of Time" and a smoke dance, whatever that is.

SUICIDE BALKED As Wife Arrives

With his neck and wrists slashed, Matthew Joyce, 25, of West Broadway, South Boston, was found in his room today by his wife in what police reported was a suicide attempt.

Police said, was trying to hang himself with a necktie when his wife entered.

He was taken to Psychopathic hospital for observation. He has been in poor health.

HUSBAND SLAIN Wife Arraigned

Mrs. Ernestine Henderson, 34, colored, of Harrison street, Roxbury, was held without bail today in Roxbury Court on a charge of shooting her husband, Hilton, 27, to death last night.

Mrs. Henderson pleaded not guilty.

Police charge the shooting took place in an automobile in front of their home during an argument.

MURDER TRIAL HITS SNAG

Exeter, N. H., May 10 (AP)—Plans to prosecute Genaro Piccoli and Leo Gagne, both of Lynn, Mass., jointly indicated last week for murder in the first degree in the death of Mrs. Florence Foley, 40, unemployed waitress, struck a snag today as official announced today that several hundred investors (probably) would get nothing.

The attorney-general announced that State police would begin an intensive search for McCormack, who is believed to be in hiding in the middle west. Dever said:

"I have asked police to spare no effort or expense in locating McCormack."

McCormack is the only person involved in this probe. Others connected with the company were only in his employ.

"There are no assets of the company left. The depositors and investors will not be able to collect a penny."

FORESTERS Breakfast Sunday

The annual communion mass and breakfast of the M. C. O. F. of the South Boston district will be held Sunday.

At 9 o'clock mass in the Gate of Heaven Church, members of the joint courts of South Boston will receive Holy Communion.

A breakfast will follow in the new Foresters Building, 679 East Fourth street.

The mild cigarette the athletes smoke is the mild cigarette for YOU!

A cigarette so mild you can smoke as many as you want—that's what athletes say about Camels. And when a champion talks about "condition"—"wind"—healthy nerves—real tobacco mildness—he knows what he's talking about.

Listen to Gene Sarazen. "Traveling and playing as much as I do—I have to keep in condition. I smoke Camels steadily. They are so mild they never get my 'wind'—never upset my nerves."

Other athletes back him up.... "I smoke all I want and yet keep in top condition. I smoke Camels and only Camels," says Mel Ott, home-run hitter of the New York Giants.... Georgia Coleman, Olympic champion diver, says: "Camels don't cut down on my 'wind'...." Bill Miller, outstanding oarsman; Jim Lancaster, N. Y. U.'s 1934 basketball captain; John Skillman, pro squash racquets champion—hundreds of sports stars smoke Camels regularly and report that Camels never get their "wind" or nerves.

What this mildness means to you

It means you can smoke Camels all you want! Champion athletes have made this important discovery: Camel's costlier tobaccos are so thoroughly mild, they can smoke them as often as they please, without disturbing their "wind" or nerves.

HEALTHY NERVES, "WIND," ENERGY—they're all part of being "in condition." Condition is important to you—on vacation, in the office, at home. You can keep "in condition," yet smoke all you please. Athletes say: "Camels never get your wind."

SO MILD YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT!

Camels COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

• Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

JUNGLE GOLD Thrilling Story of Adventure By Rex Beach

The Story So Far:

TRUE to form, Steve Pentecost, soldier of fortune, left his wife Hannah two weeks after their marriage in New Orleans to hunt gold in Central America. He returns four days after their son is born, promising never to leave again. Overjoyed at being a father, leaving his wife deeply in his state of fashion, he goes off to celebrate young Steve's arrival. At Madame Vie's notorious resort he meets three adventurers plotting a revolution in Honduras: Gunner Matern, professional soldier; Dan Marchand, banana grower; Manuel Garcia, Honduran patriot. They beg Steve to join them; he refuses, remembering his promise to Hannah. A celebratory feast follows. Steve, picks a fight with Steve, who never hits him out a window. Without waiting to see if he is killed Steve escapes with the three conspirators and finds himself on their yacht, Menomau, which picks up at sea their gun runner, the Caracasa. On the Caracasa they and friend Handara, four collars men against an entire army. Their motives: Garcia, love of country; Matern, who fights for a living; Marchand, to build a great banana empire; Steve, to make a fortune for Hannah and young Steve. Steve has topped off their filibustering expedition to the Honduran and seven days out their filibustering expedition to the Honduran. The gun-runner, Kustick, despite the loss of his moustache, and the murderous machine gunning of Matern, have the Caracasa close enough for Steve to board the Progresso. Armed with machete and revolver, Steve, boards, captures the boat single-handed.

IT WAS some time later. Steve was stripped to the waist, his shirt lay at his feet in a bloody heap. By the light of Kustick's kiosk lamp Marchand was dressing his left arm, the bulging muscles of which carried a bad cut. Elsewhere on the schooner injured men were being attended but the Garcias had suffered comparatively little. Thanks to their machine guns the only loss of life had been confined to the Progresso.

From the deck of the tug came anti-aircraft. At a look of inquiry an order, "Fire," then the sound from Steve's head. He started, he dropped his machete. "It's the gunboat's captain! ... started, he dropped his machete. Too bad! But—his what he'd give us . . . I don't mind the fighting. It's the cleaning up!" He closed his eyes as if to avoid thought of it. "Matern doesn't seem to mind."

"I think he rather likes it," Marchand nodded without opening his eyes. He had grown pretty cracked the yolk would run out. But how and where to crack it? Trujillo and Ceta were impossible. Then his thoughts turned to Puerto Cortes. He pondered.

"I don't mind the fighting," Steve spoke it with a reasoned force that was electrifying. They were startled, they did not interrupt.

Garcia was the first to break the silence. "But, senior," he protested. "There are 800 men in barracks at Cortes. They know we know. And Colonel Quiche is in command. He's well, he's one of the worst."

"You propose to tackle 800 men under Quiche with less than 100?" Marchand inquired, incredulously. "Why, half of our gang has only just been pressed into service! You're crazy, Steve."

"That or nothing," the latter said. "I know the layout at Cortes. If you can depend on that German gunner we've got a chance. But I guess you can stand over him with a Colt. Necessary. You and Garcia handle the machine. Matern and I will take the men ashore. Once we get set we can stop Quiche before he starts."

It was inevitable that Pentecost should take command of this expedition. The crucial hour arrived: from the moment he had come into action on the Progresso both Garcia and Marchand had

After a few pointed questions Matern turned his head toward his chin, then nodded. "Something like that. The town's made to order, like Steve says. Boys! If I can get set up in the right spot—"

What the hell! Let's take it!" Garcia laughed breathlessly. "Good! I yield, because there's no turning back. But I wonder at myself. Three-seconds against eight hundred! Let's get into motion quickly. If we discuss it further we'll surely defeat ourselves."

Caramba! If the dream came tomorrow at least we will have written our names in fire. Again that night the Caracasa sailed under the shadow of mountains which, like statey women walked along the shore, their skirts trailing in the low lands. The Southern Cross rose between the schooner's spinnaker and bowsprit and her port foremast, the cut. Horrid, I believe he can turn the blade of a machete."

Steve uttered a gruff denial of the "It's a miracle! Thanks to him, the ship is safe. Those three threw down their arms before we could get at them. They've melted."

"You're not badly hurt, comrade? Tell me it's nothing! I'm at sight of your blood my heart breaks!"

"It's all right," Marchand asserted. "He's too tough to cut. Horrid, I believe he can turn the blade of a machete."

"It's all right," Marchand asserted. "He's too tough to cut. Horrid, I believe he can turn the blade of a machete."

Steve uttered a gruff denial of the "It's a miracle! Thanks to him, the ship is safe. Those three threw down their arms before we could get at them. They've melted."

CREAM PRICES 'JOHN F.' CALLS MAY BE CUT ON SEN. LONG

A conference of the Boston milk dealers was to be held today with its principal objective a reduction in the retail price of cream, now selling at 35 cents a half pint. Joseph C. Cort, state administrator for the Milk Control Board, called the meeting, which will be held at the headquarters of the board, 225 Washington street.

Cort said the general milk situation, which has lately become very unsettled, may also be discussed, but that that will be subordinated to the move to lower cream prices.

Curlew in Belfast
Belfast, Ireland, May 10 (AP)—A curlew was imposed on the York street area of Belfast today after being shot last night in which one man was shot and wounded and several bombs exploded.

Washington, May 10—Seventy-year-old former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston barred from Senator Huey Long's office and came out.

"I found the senator very sympathetic," Fitzgerald said, after he had attempted to persuade Long to withdraw his opposition to the bill which the Port of Boston hopes to obtain readjustment of freight rates, which the port believes are discriminatory.

The attempt of Boston and other North Atlantic ports to get what they believe would be more equitable rail differentials has been stalled by an interstate commerce commission ruling, which holds that a port cannot be considered a locality.

Senator Long, who is a member of the Senate interstate commerce committee, has opposed the bill.

Mr. Boston Count New Mat Ace

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING of new: Wrestling has a new sensation in the person of Count Casimir Polowski, bearded Polish nobleman, who knocked off Rudy Dusek in straight falls in a sensational upset at the Arena.

Dusek was to have wrestled Gus Sonnenberg. The latter was unable to go through with the bout on account of an injured leg.

Polowski was announced as an unknown, but he was known to most of the fans, and then stole the show by his surprising victory.

I have read a great deal about Polowski in European newspapers. In Germany, Poland and elsewhere, he is generally regarded as the best wrestler in the world. Polowski had a hard time to grow so as to cover an eye scar he received in the world war.

"Man Mountain" Dean visited Europe a few years ago, and set himself up as the bearded champion. Polowski knocked him out and insisted that Dean meet him. The "Man Mountain" took a boat for America rather than collide with the Count.

ON DEAN'S TRAIL

POLAWSKI told me today he planned to go to the Pacific Coast to wrestle Dean. He has been carrying on negotiations with Lou Davis and "Toots" Mondt, California mat promoters.

Mondt has a novel idea which should help stem up a match between Polowski and Dean. He will insist that the wrestlers agree that the man who loses be shaved in the ring.

Meanwhile "Toots" plans to conduct a contest between Los Angeles barbers. The winner will be given the right to shave the loser of the Polowski-Dean match.

Judging from the form the Count wrestled against Dusek he will not experience any difficulty winning from Dean.

I note that youthful Don O'Mahoney, Irish champion, conquered Dean in the international tournament in Los Angeles. It took only six minutes for Don's "Irish Whip" to get the better of the gigantic "Man Mountain."

O'Mahoney will start back East next week. Paul Bowler is anxious to wrestle O'Mahoney against Heart E. Cline, Gus Sonnenberg or Strangler Lewis at the Garden on May 24.

GEORGE HERE

ED DON George is here to complete training for his finish bout, but two falls out of three, with George Zaharias, which will be staged at the Garden on Monday night.

"I am confident I shall win," said George, "but I realize I shall have a hard battle on my hands. Zaharias uses so many illegal holds that one is obliged to be on his guard at all times."

"I am glad Zaharias will not be permitted to use a straight hold. This was the hold that gave me so much trouble in our last contest."

"I believe I am stronger than Zaharias and a much better wrestler."

"If I win, I shall be ready to take on O'Mahoney, DeCianer, Sonnenberg, London, Browning, Chief Little Wolf or any of the other challengers. I feel I am at the peak of my wrestling form, and that I can down all comers."

RANDOM SHOTS

JIM Buckley writes that John Anderson will outpunch Al McCoy in their ten-round bout at the Arena next Tuesday night. . . Anderson, a former hockey star, is confident he will sock his way to a title match with Bob Olla. . . The "Greek Terror" who will oppose Bud Mignault in the ten-round semifinal has been displaying good form in his workouts at Jerry Buckley's gym. . . If the "Greek Terror" would shorten up his right hand punch a bit, he would be one of the most dangerous hitters in the boxing game. . . Mignault is an aggressive, wide open fighter, and the "Greek Terror" should get some good shots at him.

Jim Munroe is finding it difficult to furnish sufficient stable accommodations at Rockingham Park. The meeting that opens next Wednesday has attracted a record number of thoroughbreds.

NEW ENGLAND OUTBOARD DRIVERS OFF FOR ALBANY

JOE PALOOKA

Together at Last Hudson River.

Marathon Tomorrow

By E. R. Schriftgiesser

New England's dardest outboard racing drivers were en masse on Albany today to take a 24-hour part in the annual Hudson river outboard motor boat marathon.

The famous race twice won by Boston pilots, will start early Sunday morning over the treacherous 120-mile course.

Leading the New England contingent will be Marshall Eldridge, veteran outboarder from East Weymouth, who this winter coasted up on the Plymouth circuit, winning the Colonel Green trophy three times.

Another old timer who is still going strong is Bob Bowles, boat builder and racing man from Hingham. Bob has had bad luck in previous Hudson attempts, but is still undaunted. His younger brother, Oris Bowles, is also planning to compete Sunday.

From Cape Cod waters will speed three young drivers who should rank among the favorites. They include Clayton Bishop, the deputy fire chief from Otis; and two Buzzards Bay boys, Charlie Wagner and Alden Baker.

RUTH Deal Still BURNS

STENGEL LEADS WAILS

By Associated Press

New York, May 10.—Details of the deal between the National and American Leagues whereby the Boston Braves acquired Babe Ruth are beginning to leak out, and here and there lurks considerable hard feelings, particularly in Brooklyn.

It seems that when the matter of placing Ruth for 1935 became a question of national, international importance, the club owners got together and talked the situation over.

The Yankees didn't want Ruth any longer, but they had to have a right hand pitcher. No one in the American League would sell or trade them the kind of hurler they wanted. Boston, and the National League, wanted Ruth, and there were pitchers in the league that clubs wouldn't sell or trade to each other, but didn't mind sending to the Yankees.

MY MAN

So the Yankees agreed to pay $120,000 for a National League pitcher, and the National League club owners prepared a list from which the Yankees could choose. In return for this, the Yanks gave Ruth. The list turned over to Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees, contained the name of his Pat Malone, one of Joe's favorites when he was plinking the Chicago Cubs to a pennant in 1929.

"There's my man," he said.

Colonel Ruppert cheerfully mailed Sam Bredon, of the Cardinals, a check for $15,000. The National League club owners, still keeping their managers in the dark about the whole business, waived, as they had promised, on Malone.

The move in Brooklyn, when some of its leaked out, ruffled the waters of the famed Gowanus canal. All winter long Casey Stengel had been looking for just such a right hander as Malone to bolster his staff and make a pennant contender out of a nominally fifth place club.

Casey stormed into the front office of the Dodgers, yelling, "Where's the Manly-shank so and so who walked on Malone?"

The powers that be quickly told him that this was a matter that didn't concern him at all, and please would he just mind his own business and not ask any questions?

WAILS, WAILS

In Pittsburgh where, with the phenomenal success of young Cy Young, the acquisition of Jim Weaver and Guy Bush from the Cubs, the addition of a right hander of Malone's ability must mean a pennant, the blues probably were just as low and the howling just as loud.

Just about the only club in the league who wouldn't have leaped at the opportunity to get Malone at the water price was the Cubs. Charley Grimm turned Pat loose in the first place because they weren't getting along well together.

Big Pat is doing all right with the Yanks. He just one start, but in relief roles he has done yeoman service. McCarthy always gets the big temperamental fellow. It looks as though he's going to continue to do so successfully. And if the Yanks do finally win the American League pennant, who it's the old Babe again who swung it.

Iron Man

McNamara Sued for Alimony

Newark, N. J., May 10 (INS)

—Mrs. Reggie McNamara today had filed suit against the veteran slide-day bike rider asking for "separate maintenance," charging him with having treated her cruelly since December of 1931.

McNamara, meanwhile, was free in $1000 bail after having been taken in custody two days ago on a writ of "ne exeat." Immediately after he had posted the bail, the "Iron Man" was served with an order to show cause why he should not pay alimony while the suit for separate maintenance is pending.

HUSKY CREW Takes Challenge

Seattle, May 10 (AP)—With the University of Washington crew, one of $12,000 raised to send three crews East to the Puget Sound regatta, athletic officials today won acceptance of a prize money race with the University of Wisconsin on their way East. The race will be on either June 7 or 8 on Lake Mendota, home course of the Badgers.

AUTO RACES At Readville

The famous Readville Speedway, Readville, Mass., will again be the mecca for the lovers of automobile racing. It was announced last night by Ralph Noll, prominent Dedham business man and head of the Lincoln Club, Dedham, and arrangements are now complete for the opening of the season, which will be a five race program on Memorial Day, May 20.

SECOND ROUND
Follies
Wilson vs. Crowley
Fellows vs. Trowbridge
Cliff vs. J. H.
Boardman vs. Marshall

By Bill Grimes

The Country Club, Brookline, May 10.—R. W. "Bunny" Wilson, South Shore, defending champion, had a narrow escape in the first round of play in The Country Club Cup tournament here this morning, when he was three down and four to play against Harry Snelling, Concord.

There was one extra hole made in a weird way in which Harry Snelling, Concord, lost a hole to Wilson in the first hole.

Going to the 11th hole, Marshall was 4 up. Then Hopkins won consecutive holes to be down 2. At the 17th, a stroke prevented Hopkins from adding the match. Hopkins put back his other ball by three putting the 18th. At the extra hole, Marshall's 5 one over par was good for a win and the match.

The Ellis-Harrison match which the former won 1 up was a nip and tuck affair. Harrison came from behind and in the last hole won the tilt at the 17th after being 3 down and five to go.

Must Girl Tell Fiance All of Her Past?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
NOVELS, plays, tracts and sermons have been written on this question: How much of her past should a girl reveal to the man she expects to marry?

That there should be no past to reveal has been the verdict concerning women through the ages.

Revered it as you may, the standards of the sexes have changed, and when you think this is for better, instead of worse, the facts must be faced. The woman pays in no empty platitudes. Nature sees to that, despite all arguments to the contrary. And his "freedom," about which you've heard so much from the generation that has grown up since the World War, has presented a pretty heavy bill for payment at times.

TRUE STORY
There is no argument like an illustration. Here's one from the morning's mail:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: "When I was very young I had the misfortune of loving a man too well. There's no use to go into all that now. I paid the bill which meant hiding away like a criminal for over a year. The next way I can pay of myself is that I never once thought of deserting my little son, and I have always paid for his care, even if I went without the necessities of life. I myself, I think more dearly than a cat can tell you. The question now is: Must I tell about my little son to the man who has asked me to marry him? Rather than give up this child, I would forego all prospects of a home, live and those things that mean Heaven on earth to a woman. But I have been through so much, and I want care and cherishing so desperately!"

"My mother has said to me 'Be sorry for your sinning, but don't let it affect your whole life. I am at my wit's end to know what to do. Could you help me with a word of counsel?'"

"It's an easy and safe to give a long-distance verdict to a girl who is torn between mother-love and all those things a woman holds most dear. It is a terrible responsibility to sit in the judgment seat and hand out a decision which may wreck this girl's one chance of happiness."

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?
The best that one can do is to try what one would do in her place. Loving her child devotedly, as she does, would be a frightful thing to go through if she denied his existence.

On the other hand, the man who has asked her to share his life has placed in her hands a chance and tell the man who has asked her to share his life. She could have deserted him, but she did not, even going without the necessities of life to provide for him. In this, she has proved her worth.

In her place, I should take a chance and tell the man who has asked her to share his life. She could have deserted him, but she did not, even going without the necessities of life to provide for him. In this, she has proved her worth.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
Did you ever hear of anything like this? My boy friend is very generous about taking me to dinner, shows and places of amusement, but instead of meeting me, somewhere, or calling at my office for me, he insists that I call at his place of business for him. I've done this one or twice, and that's enough.

What's the matter with him? Doesn't he know any better, or is he trying to show off that he has a girl?

LUCY ANN
Whatever his reasons may be, he's wrong. Once or twice in an emergency, he might ask you to call for him, but to make a practice of this is unthinkable.

A girl told me how she cured her young man of this. Her tactics were cruel but effective. She called at his office, and before the young people in the same room with him, presented him with a corsage bouquet and said, "I thought you might wear these this evening."

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I work out of town and comes to see me about every two weeks or 10 days. We're engaged, and though he claims he isn't jealous, and doesn't mind if I go out with others, I'm afraid he might feel hurt if I accept other men's invitations. On engagement has not been announced.

CONSTANT READER
It's up to you whether you accept such invitations or not. There is certainly no objection to a girl, whose engagement is not announced, going out with other men. Even when an engagement has been announced, it is done very often. If a girl can find a young man willing to play "Baa-a-Claaaa"

Which Type of Girl Appeals to You?

They say that at least once in every man's life he has had a softening of the heart for a nurse. The girl in white. Florence Nightingale. Those of us who are big boys and girls now, and can remember all about the World War, remember vividly what the putting on of the white coat of the war-nurse meant. What a snare to Cupid that demure habitment was!

It is the WHITE that spells the allure? The white of sacrificing service. The crisp blue and white of the frock that looks DOMESTIC along with its rigid uniformity. Is it the coming to the surface of the little body that once ran after "nursie"?

I've had my hand held on a hospital cot, every time I woke in pain! And I loved the face that bent above me, shining haired and framed in white. And I'm only a lady! What about a man? Twice as susceptible of course—and a much bigger baby when in pain.

Pretty little, practical little, clean little Florence Nightingale. Dressed to slay Love. A flirt even when she doesn't know it. A Menace and a Ministering Angel.

But remember if you marry her, and she goes on with her work, you will be just ONE in her ward—which is the world!

Rare Carnation Scent

Ideal for Mother's Day Gift

By ALIET HILLEY

When you were a babe in arms or perhaps just about sprouting pigtails, your mother or grandmother had on the guest room bureau a carnation sachet.

If you were people of means there was also a bottle of carnation toilet water or perfume! All this in the late nineties.

Now in 1935, in Hollywood particularly, the fashionable girls and women are wearing carnations in the lapels of their tailcoats. The vogue for carnation essence has returned with a bang!

So if I tell you that you can get a rare carnation fragrance at an unbelievable low price, will you stir yourself to go after it? Down at one of your best cosmetic counters they are selling a French carnation perfume in a midsize size (if you cannot splash on the larger sizes, and the fragrance so close resembles the flower's deliciously delicate scent that you will be ecstatic). And when you wear a home, mother will probably burst into tears over sweet memories; nothing at all will console her but a bottle of the same fragrance.

Lovely suburbanized Jeanette MacDonald, who, in "Naughty Marietta," nightingales her way into affection with her song, adores the scent of the carnation, which so admirably suits her airy personality.

We can think of no other gift for Mother's Day than a bottle of this rare carnation fragrance.

If you wish to know the name of this carnation perfume call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at The Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Question: What is the proper way of applying cold cream to the face? It is stretched every time the face is washed or creamed. It will lose resilience. Hence you must stretch it each time you wash your face. It is the natural inclination. If it is stretched every time, the skin is stretched and the pores are enlarged. This is why I would like to know the correct process of applying and removing cream. I am a student. H.N.E. K.

Answer: Skin has a certain amount of elasticity. If it is stretched every time the face is washed or creamed, it will lose resilience. Hence you must stretch it each time you wash your face. It is the natural inclination. If it is stretched every time, the skin is stretched and the pores are enlarged. This is why I would like to know the correct process of applying and removing cream. MR. SPENCER REVEALS HIS IDENTITY

AS MY father's calm, quiet voice said, "Suppose you do nothing of the kind," the young state troopers, who evidently had not seen him approach because of their absorption in questioning me, looked up, startled and immediately belligerent.

"If it isn't the old guy who gathered the autumn leaves!" the irrepressible trooper exclaimed, but Jimmy wanted no time on periscope.

"Say, you!" he snarled, advancing menacingly toward my father. "Witness you think you get off at interfering with an officer?"

"You will kindly modify both your manner and your dictation," my father said, "else it will be my painful duty to report you to Captain Jackson."

ORDERS FROM CAPTAIN:
"Oh, yeah?" Jimmy sneered.

"Better get a spile with less noise on it. Every woman that runs by is light, or man that runs round the side. It's always a sick kick of Captain Jackson. If he ever had an old home work, the birds who claim his hair's pale whenever they get into trouble, there wouldn't be a hair in the house. Now don't waste any more of my time. I haven't got all day to stand around here, and I want to hear what this dame has to say."

"Harterget!" My father's voice was suddenly imperative. "No matter what happens, do not utter a single word."

"What!" the trooper named

Jimmy exclaimed, striding menacingly toward my father, but he suddenly stopped as my father held out a sheet of paper to him. "From Captain Jackson," my father said simply. "I advise you to read it carefully."

Jimmy stopped abruptly, hesitated for the fraction of a second, then held out his hand for the sheet of paper. His comrade came directly to his aid, and looked over his shoulder as he read.

"Holy cat!" I heard him exclaim and a wide grin accompanied the expletive.

But Jimmy was not grinning. With his young face grim and set he read the paper through, then went back to the beginning and read it through again. Finally he held the paper up and carefully examined the lower part of it.

I guessed that he was inspecting the signature, and my guess was confirmed when he turned to his comrade and said in low, tense tones.

"That's his fat, isn't it?" "If I say it, he's the other replied, and then, in what he evidently believed to be a whisper, but which was distinctly audible to us, he added a fervent, "Gee! What a mose! We'd better eat, crawl, and quack!"

"I think that comradely, loyal Jimmy's heart, but his scholarly ediment was a growl. "You keep out of this kid. This is my mess. I'll clean it up myself."

He turned to my father, drew himself up, and saluted him as he would a superior officer. "I'm sorry sir," he said. "I had no idea who you were. In three anything you want us to do."

My father's face changed miraculously from set sternness to geniality.

"There are no apologies needed," he told the young trooper. "You've done only what you thought was your duty, but you were a bit overzealous. That is a good idea, which is generally cured with a 'So.'"

"What's the your car?" my father interrupted. "I have a few yards in the bushes."

"Can you get to keep all traffic away from this road until we are well on the way?"

YOU'RE HAPPY WHEN YOU'RE

Think back over the last month. The days you enjoyed most were the days you felt in great shape. Increase those sunny days by keeping fit.

Avoid common constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals. It may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy. It dulls your enthusiasm, takes the fun out of living.

Kellogg's ALL-Bran furnishes you with "bulk" in convenient form. ALL-Bran also provides vitamin B and iron. This gentle natural food is much better than patent medicines for constipation. It's relaxing effective with continued use.

Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. Serve cases, with each meal. If not relieved the next day, see your doctor.

At all grocers in the red-and-green packets. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Ferry Boat's Propellers Miss Man Fighting for Life Under Churning Froth of Waters

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Well, boys and girls, to date we have not had an adventure story about a man drowning in the Sahara Desert, and no yarns have come in about a bird who was eaten by vicious oysters in the Alps Mountains in Switzerland. But believe it or not, I HAVE a yarn here about a man who was run over by a ferryboat.

Anthony Hutzler, of 2155 Grand avenue, Bronx N. Y., sends in the story, and just as soon as I get over the jitters I got from reading his yarn, Tony and I are going to start a campaign against these doggone hit-and-run ferryboat drivers.

But all jokes aside, this is a story, and when you get through reading it I know you'll agree with me that Tony had one of the oddest things happen to him that ever fell to the lot of any man.

On April 1, 1917 Tony Hutzler was working at the ferry slip on Ellis Island, and one of his jobs was known as "greasing the racks."

You know those big wooden bulkheads that are built out into the water from the sides of a ferry house, for the boat to slide into? Well, those are the "racks" and they grease those doggone things regularly, to cut down the friction—so that the ferry boat in rubbing against them, won't scrape them all to pieces.

Well, sir, that was the job Tony Hutzler was doing. To do it he had to stand on a small float about 10 feet long and three feet wide, that sat on the top of the water. Another lad—a fellow named John Thompson, walked along the top of the bulkhead, towing the float back and forth as Tony greased.

And incidentally, another part of John Thompson's job was to tow that float out of the slip pronto whenever a ferry boat hove in sight, because when a boat came into that slip—well, it was just no place for Tony to be. If those boats chewed up the sides of those big wooden bulkheads, what would they do to poor Tony?

Tony had finished greasing one rack and was working on the other. Several times during the job, he had knocked off work and let John pull him around to the outside of the slip when a boat came in. He was almost finished with the task now, when another boat came in sight, rounding the buoys that mark the channel into Ellis Island.

Tony saw it coming and set down his grease bucket. He waited a few minutes, wondering why John Thompson didn't start towing him out, when suddenly he heard a shout from up on top of the bulkhead. It was John—shouting to him to get out, and tugging frantically at the rope, which had become jammed between two loose planks in the rack.

Get out? Tony would have loved to get out. But where was he going to get to? Before him, the steep side of the bulkhead loomed, steep, slippery and precipitous. On the other three sides of him were water—black, oily water that looked to Tony like a grave—his grave. Because if he jumped in there now, and tried to swim out—well—the ferry would be on top of him before he could make it.

The ferry was right at the head of the slip now, and Tony was holding his breath in an agony of suspense. No use trying to signal the pilot now. Even if he saw Tony he couldn't stop that boat. In time to keep it from passing over him.

Tony couldn't think of anything to do—so he did nothing at all. He just stood there dumbly and took it, and at that moment, he must have felt like one of the Christians martyrs in a Roman arena, standing, passive and unresisting while a pack of wild animals gored up his body.

The ferry came up, but the float he was standing on, and pushed it under water. Tony went down with it—down into the acid, oily waters of the upper bay.

He took in a deep breath as he went under—down into the churning froth of water kicked up by the ferry's forward propeller. There were two of those propellers, one on each end, and under the forward and after decks. One of them pulled the ferry while the other pushed it, and Tony was sure that if he wasn't caught up in the first one and mangled to death, the other would not fail to get him.

He felt the first one pass—knew by the sudden stillness of the water that he had gotten by the first propeller safely. Still holding his breath, he wriggled his body in the water, trying to keep it near the side of the slip.

He kept his arms close beside him—didn't dare strike out with them and swim lest his hands get caught in the second propeller that was due along any moment.

He felt another rush of churning water against his body. The second propeller was coming now. Now he was RUINED! He flattened as much as possible against the side of the pier and waited.

For a moment, the water beat in great rushes against his body. Then suddenly he felt himself rising. The churning passed over him, and in another moment he was up, out of the water, breathing the air again.

The boat had gone on and was moving into the slip. Tony struck out to swim away, when he felt something bumping beneath him. And doggoned if it wasn't the float, coming right back to pick him up again—lifting him clean out of the water. That darned ferry had passed right over him, left him unharmed, and in the very spot where he was when he started.

It isn't everybody that can be run over by a ferry boat—but what's happened to the rest of you boys and girls? If you have been bitten by a street car or chased by a pack of infuriated lamp-posts, or if anything else has happened to you in the line of adventure, send the yarn in to me.

And I know doggone well that you have had some sort of adventure. Tomorrow read "Torn from Escort."

HOLLAND SHUBERTS Plan Three Shows

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Three new musical shows are carded for the Shubert Fall program. Claude P. Greendick, chief of staff for the Shuberts as regards their orthodox relations with the dress (extraordinary incidents accepted), is in town with the details.

Mr. G. is here in the interest of "Life Begins at 8:10," which is coming back to Boston after a tour of 10 weeks at the Winter Garden and a dozen weeks in Washington.

Among the significant details about the Shubert's new season program is the one which tells of the life of the Greenwicks. The new production of the "Ziegfeld Follies" is the last of the season.

George Holland, a man who has written George's lyrics since the days of "Lady, Be Good," wrote some of the lyrics in "Life Begins at 8:10."

He will perform the same task for the "Ziegfeld Follies" and the Shubert's latest of "Ziegfeld Follies."

The other Shubert musicals being prepared for fall production are "Not in the Guard" (the Bea Lillis show which Howard Dietz and Arthur C. Koppey wrote) and "On Your Toes." The last of the three will be produced in October.

To vary the routine of all work and little play and no clocking, the matchless Signor Jimmie Savo, star of the Theatre Guild, will appear in "On Your Toes."

Mr. Savo has never made a wager on a horse in his life. But he has an idea that night, revolutionizing the business of "improving the horse-luck" in an activity, he will follow the Kendall stable that is the New England tracks and make funny faces at that they become convulsed in the stretch.

Helen Hayes Will Make One More Picture

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, May 10.—Helen Hayes' request to be relieved from making any further pictures was seriously considered by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, but she still owes them one picture. I believe the plan is for her to come to Hollywood to star in this one picture, "Laughing Pioneer," based on a novel by Paul Green, and this is her swan song.

Louella O. Parsons

Bryan Ferry is giving up producing national studio pictures and settling down as a nice legitimate producer. He has been signed by Hal Wallis to produce pictures again for Warner Brothers and his first will be "The Real McCoy" by George Cukor, of course, a picture that Bryan is becoming a legitimate producer we mustn't lose sight of the fact that he directed "Warner Brothers' excellent talkies, "Lights of New York" which postdated even "The Jazz Singer" was directed by Bryan and Hugh Herbert was in this picture his first appearance on the screen.

It has taken the Universal Company months and months to clear the rights to "Blossom Time," Samuel Bronston's delightful musical comedy. You'd be surprised to know how many people enter into negotiations of the kind. Now that the musical is finally free from all encumbrances it will be put into shape. Marie Egan will appear, along with everyone on the Universal lot, and perhaps surprise her in her American production.

When Julie Haydon was here in Hollywood her chief claim to fame was her resemblance to Ann Harding. Even when she had appeared in "The Informer" on the stage she seemed people there didn't seem to be a chance for her to make it in Hollywood. Now she's here and cast her lot with the "Roundup." Now there's one thing about Coward—he is a most kindly teacher and he's acquired in little Haydon people-friendliness that had never been properly encouraged. The result is a friendly personality in a man talked about than any picture in the world. Paramount on the strength of the picture has been a big winner's money and it's a big hit back at a Kansas play.

Some way Raymond Pinchot

and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, try as they would, just couldn't get together and now I hear that her screen debut will not be under the auspices of MGM. Rosamond will play the queen in "The Three Musketeers" for RKO, a role that is the sort of thing she wanted to do. She was never willing to be just a simple little ingenue. She felt that she must have a role that would give her dignity and a little authority.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The most excited man in Hollywood, RICHARD DIX, when the doctor announced twin boys; he immediately went out and ordered a double supply of crabs and clothes for his two football players. He was down with a mean cold, but of her picture for a few days.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, ignoring WALLACE BERRY's pester to let her even discuss matters with him, LOUIS B. MAYER entering into a small dinner in her dance in honor of MAYOR FRANK KAGAN of Jersey City and MAYOR EDWARD KELLY of Chicago.

COLLEGE OF FRASSO, one of the prize pupils of Terry Hunt (he, trainer), looking like a million, lunching with MRS. RICARDO CORTES, sitting nearby GARY COOPER and MRS. COOPER, their first public appearance since they returned from New York. CLAUDETTE COLBERT so beautiful these days in a smart tailored dress chatting with DOROTHY D. FRASSO, who as usual, had a lot of amusing stories to tell.

MRS. RICHARD BARTHELEME giving a small dinner in honor of GRACE MOORE who leaves with her husband and son for a European holiday; JENNIE DOLLY, one of the famous Dolly twins, expected here the last of the month.

MAE MURRAY doing a lot of dancing these days at a Hollywood hotel with JIMMIE HIGHTON and GUY EMMETT DUNNE, leaving at Yosemite where she plans to stay for a while. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Bowdoin's Bill

Opening tomorrow at the Bowdoin one of the screen features on the new program will be "George White's 133rd Scandals," with a cast headed by Ann Payne and James Dunn. Ned Sparks, Cliff Edwards, Eleanor Powell and Benny Rubin are featured in the cast.

The companion picture is "In Spirit of Danger," with Marian Marsh and Wallace Ford in leading roles.

Burlesque Shows

Some of burlesque's biggest stars are booked for appearances within the next few weeks at the Old Howard.

The parade of favorites starts next week with Linda Wassau, one of the most famous beauties in burlesque, who comes to Boston following an eight-month engagement at the Casino di Paris in New York.

Fred Binder and Mike Sachs resume their comedy partnership after several years' separation at the week following at the Howard, sharing the honors with California's Carroll.

Jackie Is 'Dinky'

By ANN AMES

Jackie Cooper has fresh trials and tribulations in "Dinky," which opened at the Paramount and Fenway yesterday with "It's a Small World," featuring Spencer Tracy and Wendy Barrie as the companion picture.

Teens and cheers for young America, with sentiment running high, wild and handsome give Master Cooper a role right up his sleeve.

His "Dinky," a small card in the big military academy, Ned does there the county orphanage, where Joe, Rammy and Mary are his admiring friends.

When his widowed mother (Mary Astor) is innocently involved in a stock market swindle and sent to jail, Dinky is blissfully ignorant until a detestable fellow cadet spreads the news.

Then he runs away. When Roger Pryor, his mother's friend and lawyer, finds him, Dinky insists on having his tuition refunded, and returning to the change, manfully hides his heartache, but otherwise managing to have a pretty good time.

The big football game finds Dinky's mother on the sidelines just in time to inspire her boy in the winning touchdown, and he's related with hands playing and colors flying at the good old Academy.

This inconsequential bit of juvenile hokum has some clever youngsters in the cast and a broadly comic contribution by Roger Emmets as Tony, the junkman.

For more mature consideration

there is "It's a Small World." After some fast driving and a head-on collision, Spencer Tracy and Wendy Barrie are both arrested in a small Louisiana town.

Raymond Walburn is the acquiescent town squire who officiates at the wedding, every thing from judge to village barber. Tracy invokes an old Napoleon law, has himself appointed deputy and takes his pretty prisoner seriously.

The film story is immeasurably improved by some grand performances by an excellent cast. While Mr. Tracy is not quite as happy as in his more customary rough-neck roles, he's still refreshingly natural.

Miss Barrie is young and very lovely. As the phonograph named Judge Julius B. Clummock, Raymond Walburn is a riot, and others among the realistic rascals who provide plenty of laughs are Virginia Sale and Irving Bacon.

There's one of the funniest courtroom scenes on the film records, and when the action slows up there's some pretty smart dialogue and clever character drawing to compensate.

'The Informer'

By JOYCE DATA

There will be no more memorable milestones in the 1935 film year than "The Informer," which was given its world premiere at the Keith Memorial Theater last evening.

"The Informer," with Victor McLaglen in the title role, stands in the shining ranks of art, with an initial capital.

The simple and incontrovertible truth that a man's conscience needs to acquiesce provided Liam O'Flaherty with the motive for his dramatic tale of troubled days in Ireland, and of Gyro Nolan who sold his soul for 50 pounds.

A 10-foot-tall Dublin night Frank McPhillips, with a price on his head for plotting against the Black and Tans, homeless and hungry, takes a visit to his

Then Gyro, never knowing why, found out (resembling, desperate, poor, loving Kate Madden, who longed for long ago that she would afford the principles, sends Frankie to his death.

and blubbering and whimpering he is sent to his cell and marked for death, his dulled brain still plots a fantastic escape.

But his inevitable end is marked, and desperately fighting his way from Kate Madden's poor room, he meets a fitting and ignominious death.

Victor McLaglen turns in a commanding portrait, and the O'Connor as the bereaved mother is not far behind.
